Meaning

Many people who live with dementia experience difficulty in using automatic tilling machines, such as cash points, automatic checkouts at supermarkets, ticket machines at train and bus stations and car parks, and toll booths. The 'Face it Together' group from Bradford actively campaigns to improve these systems. If people who live with dementia were consulted by the companies who produced such operating systems, then the system could improve.

Symbolism

The embellishments around the banner represent train tickets and shopping receipts, and the corner illustrations represent happy and satisfied customers. The colours blue, gold, and red are taken from the Bradford coat of arms. Blue represents loyalty, red represents courage and revolution, and gold is indicative of ambition.
