Memories are all that we are

Photographs

2019

“For decades photography has allowed us to gain a visual representation of our past and has provided us with a greater understanding of not only who we are, but who our ancestors were and how they lived their lives. Our memories are often informed by images, would we remember certain events if there was no photographic evidence? I began photographing my family and their surrounding to create something that could inform future generations and document the small part we played in their history.”

Where in the North are you based?

Haworth, West Yorkshire

What does living in The North mean to you?

Living in the North of England is important to me, and has become part of my DNA. Nowhere else can you find beautiful landscapes, history, tradition and friendliness that you can find in the North.

What inspires you?

I am inspired by storytellers and documentarians. Practitioners who are able to take an aspect of a subjects life and using imagery, project it to the world.
